GRAYLING CITIZENS ENTER-TAINED BY 126th INFANTRY BAND.

Serenade Business Places and in Evening Rander Fine Program at Band Stand.

Because of the high esteem in which the citizens of Grayling are held by the members of the Michigan National guard, their 126th Infantry band consented to come to town Saturday and entertain us with some music, in response to an invitation issued by the Board of Trade. This or- is under the leadership of Bandmas- ganization hails from Grand Rapids, and is under the leadership of band- master John W. Bickert, and consisted that day of 46 musicians. They ar- rived in town at 2:00 p. m. and at once began a serenade, playing se- lections before the business places.

At 4:00 o'clock they went to the ball game to be played between the 126th Infantry and Grayling ball teams, where they rendered a num- ber of pleasing selections. Begin- ning at seven o'clock they rendered the following program at the Court house band stand:

March, Attorney General. . . . . King Overture, Comique. . . . . Kelle Betta Waltz, Forget-Me-Not. . . . . Brooks Marc, The 126th Band. . . . . Sgt. Bugler M. D. Jones.

Selection, The Grass Willow. . . . . Hirsch Saxophone sextette. . . . . Jolly Six Saxophone, Comin' Thru the Rye. . . . . Douglas Cornet, Out On Guard. . . . . (L. A. Slykes).

Finale, Star Spangled Banner. . . . . Between the third and fourth numbers on the program the fine large audience that was gathered about the court yard was privileged to listen to an inspiring address by Rev. Fr. Dunnigan, chaplain of the guard, who has been regularly in the Grayling camp for many years past and who served through the World war with the 126th regiment.

Fr. Dunnigan paid a fine tribute to our honored citizen Rasmus Han- son, for the many good things he had done for Grayling and for the State of Michigan, and made special men- tion of the lady he has so gener- ously given to the State of Michigan, which are now the permanent and beautiful home of the Michigan Na- tional Guard, at Lake Margrethe.

He commended the efforts of the Grayling Board of Trade and said that everyone should help to promote it. He said there was just as much opportunity here in Grayling as there is anywhere, that we are well located in the State, have excellent railroad facilities and other conditions that go to make this an ideal place for man- ufacturing and for the building up of large industries, if the people of the county can only realize the big things they may have and then get back of them. He said that he realized that here in Grayling there are al- ways some who won't help and are willing to let a few shoulder the re- sponsibilities while they shared in the benefits. He mentioned our fine school building with its grand auditorium and gymnasium; also our three churches, the Catholic, Methodist and Lutheran.

Fr. Dunnigan's address carried great inspiration and is bound to spur forward those who have set out to do things for Grayling and who can look forward with a vision that extends far into the future and are aiming to make this continue as an industrial community for generations to come, and to make Grayling a city of happy and prosperous people and of comfortable homes and pleasant sur- roundings.

Complimentary to the members of the band the local business men ten- dered them to a specially fine ban- quet at 5:00 p. m. at Shoppington Inn. Fifty plates were laid and ev- eryone occupied. The men greatly en- joyed the dinner and spoke highly of the fine menu that was served.

To further our hospitality to the remainder of the evening was devoted to dancing at the school gymnasium. An orchestra composed of the band furnished music and there was a fine gathering of townspeople with the members of the band and an evening of dancing was enjoyed.

We know that we speak to the sen- timents of our citizens when we say that all are deeply grateful to the 126th Infantry band for the fine afternoon that they gave us, and also to Col. Schouten, Commander of the 126th Inf. w. o made it possible for the band to get the afternoon off from camp duties. And if we have con- tributed to the pleasure of the members of the band in the small entertain- ment that we afforded them in return, we are happy indeed, and hope to see them in town again next year.

DEDICATE TREES TO MEMORY OF DEAD COMRADES.

Six beautiful specimens of white pine trees were dedicated to the mem- ory of those of the Grayling camp in 1917, members of the 32nd division who gave up their lives in the World war. The dedicatory ceremonies were conducted at the band stand before brigade headquarters at 10:00 o'clock last Sunday morning by Rev. Fr. Dun- nigan, chaplain.

Gen. Earl R. Stewart gave a re- sume of the division's history and ex- tending the work of the men of the Mexican, Civil, Spanish and World wars. Fr. Dunnigan, in his address, said, "These trees are dedicated in memory of the honored dead of the 32nd division."

All the companies in camp were present. Mrs. Harriett Story McFar- land, mezzo contralto, of Detroit, sang two solos, the title of one being "They Shall Not Pass." She was accompa- nied by Miss Elizabeth Druhan of De- troit.

The trees were planted by the side of the drive ways at each end of the Officers Club.

GUARDS AND CITI- ZENS ENJOY PARTIES

GYMNASIUM AND OFFICERS. CLUB SCENES OF PLEASANT AFFAIRS.

Most Successful Camp M. N. G. Has Ever Held. Good Order.

During the fifteen days that the Michigan National Guard have been in camp in Grayling there have been a number of pleasant dancing parties wherein the town folks have taken prominent parts. Some of these af- fairs were mentioned in the AVA- LANCHE last week.

On Wednesday night last week the citizens gave a dancing party at the school gymnasium in honor of the officers in camp. It was a delightful affair and well attended. General Earl R. Stewart and his staff and most of the officers of the Guard were present. Music was furnished by Clark's orchestra of this city. Interspersed in the program were a number of pleasing attractions. Among the lat- ter were fancy dancing by little Mis- sen J. Kelly and John J. Lane, Jane Behlke; also Misses Margrethe and Ella Hanson, and a vocal solo and dance by Miss Marie Schmidt. The Ukelele music furnished by one of the musicians was specially well received.

On Friday night of last week there was another ball given by the officers at the Club house and on Monday night of this week a dancing party was given at the school gymnasium. Both affairs were well at- tended and very delightful. Altho Monday night ended these social af- fairs there seemed to be no sadness nor gloom among the guests, everyone seemed to be in most congenial spirits. The hosts had become acquainted with the Grayling people and the guests felt perfectly at home, strict formal- ity was forgotten and only courteous friendliness existed. These pleasant affairs have been greatly enjoyed by all factions and because of them many warm friendships have been formed. The presence of many of the wives and daughters of the officers added gra- dually to the social activities of the camp.

While the officers were enjoying the society of our people the "privates and non-coms" were by no means with- out their social affairs. The pavilion at Collen's Inn was the mecca for those who had not yet received the insignia of commissions. Each evening there were dancing, singing parties and other social affairs where these young men enjoyed themselves, mingling with the young people of the town.

On Saturday night the members of the First Infantry Training Center of Michigan, 1921, an organization formed last year at Grand Rapids gave an invitation dance complimentary to their guests, at the Temple theatre. Those who attended say it was a very fine party. Punch and wafers were served.

These were the principal social af- fairs held during the camp. With in the camp there were athletic games, music, stunts and many other things to entertain the boys. The Y. M. C. A. that was held in the cement Mesa hall was always an attractive place and was usually crowded with young men. Here they were privileged to write their letters home, play games, read, visit, sing and indulge in other clean entertainment. Besides there were a number of excellent speakers who gave addresses and sermons that were greatly enjoyed and appreciated by the young men. On a few occasions they were entertained here by some of the town people. Mrs. Roy Milnes and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Jarman gave freely of some fine vocal music. Last Sunday night Rev. Harvey Pierce of Albion college addressed the Y. M. C. A. groups.

Much Accomplished in Camp.
The officers are elated over the success of the camp and the amount of training the Guard has been able to achieve. Each unit has made re- cords that are most gratifying to the officers and also to the men them- selves. The rivalry for supremacy among the units has been strong and everyone was spurred on to do their very best. This rivalry existed upon the drill grounds, the rifle and machine gun ranges, marches, cleanliness of Company streets and tents and in fact through the camp life.

The behavior of the guards was a revelation to the officers and it was seldom that anyone had to be reprimanded. The streets in town were patrolled every night by the provost guard but at no time was there any trouble. The deportment was ideal. The army of jitties that carried men to and from the camp did a big busi- ness but it was all done orderly and we have heard of no trouble whatever among them nor with the soldiers. In spite of the fact that there have been nearly 4000 men in camp there have hardly a ripple of unpleasantness to arise from their presence. The spirit of harmony between the people of Grayling and the members of the Guard is of the best, just as it should be. Our business men have received a lot of patronage from the troops and all appreciate it, and in return have tried their very best to make the men welcome and satisfied.

RAPID PROGRESS ON WILDMAN RUBBER COMPANY'S BIG FAC- TORY IN BAY CITY.

Work is progressing very rapidly on the immense tire factory of The Wildman Rubber Company, Bay City. From April 17th to July 1st the fol- lowing materials were actually used in the building: 3,100 barrels cement, 9,880 tons gravel, 1,780 tons reinforc- ing steel.

It is expected that the entire build- ing will be under roof sometime in October. The Wildman Rubber Company will have the most modern tire factory in the United States and one of the largest. The capacity of the average

LIMESTONE LEGUMES LIVESTOCK

MEAN PROFITS IN FARMING

Fall Wheat.

Those Crawford County farmers who intend to sow wheat this fall should put it on their best soil, get choice, re-cleaned seed, treat it with formaldehyde atomized on at rate of one pint to fifty bushels of seed, and plant at a date to avoid Hessian Fly.

The proper authorities at our Agri- cultural college believe this date for Crawford County to be from Septem- ber 5 to September 16.

Wheat for Poultry.
I have steadily urged our farmers to keep more good poultry, properly housed and fed.

There is a great market for eggs in Grayling, Crawford County farm- ers do not supply that market. It is necessary to snip in many eggs. This should not be by any means.

Nearly every one of our farm fam- ilies could use more money. We could get that money if we had more push and gumption. We could get it thru poultry. Poultry could "eat the table" on every one of our farms. But, no, we just let it go. We leave a miser- able little bunch of mongrel hens, covered with lice and mites, in a mis- erable dirty coop, not cleaned all winter, improperly fed, and holler about bad luck and hard times.

Hen Feed.
It will not pay a farmer to buy all his hen feed. Hens will not lay well unless properly fed. A variety of grains. You can't just throw out some corn the year around, and get away with it. Three good grains to feed each day are, wheat one feed; buckwheat, the next feed, and corn at night. These should be raised on the farm.

That is why I speak of poultry and wheat now, that you will sow wheat early in September for your hens, so that you can derive a handsome in- come from them.

Roosters should be removed from the flock and scrub hens culled out at once.

One farmer culled 30 hens out of a flock of 100 and still got just as many eggs from the remaining 70.

Your Money's Worth.

Every farmer in the county could make a few Farm Bureau dues extra above what he is now getting out of his hens, before Christmas, by attend- ing to the County Agent's suggestions on this one matter of poultry.

Summer Connections for Winter Busi- ness.

Last spring I urged all farmers, through these notes, to plant liberally of early peas, lettuce, sweet corn, potatoes, etc.; and to put their straw- berry beds in order; and to keep hens and cows in high producing order for the resort trade. Those who have been doing that and have supplied to tourists and resorters a choice article, attractively prepared, delivered when wanted, should have little trouble in securing customers for canned jellies, canned berries, and for butter and eggs to be shipped by parcels post through the winter.

But these city people are not going to tie up their trade with you if they can not depend with absolute certainty on you to send the stuff. They want a dainty, dependable article.

There is no reason why large amounts of butter and eggs and oth- er Crawford County products should not be shipped in winter to our sum- mer visitors.

It needs just one thing—spunk and gumption. Some find it easier to starve and holler than to spunk up.

For the Land's Sake.

The great need on 99 per cent of our farms is more decaying vegetable matter in the soil—humus. It can be put there by plowing down green crops. There is an imperative need of it on our farms. It is most easily obtained now by sowing rye.

Those who can yet cultivate corn once more, should sow two (2) bus- els of rye per acre, and cultivate it in.

Plow down those acres of tall green weeds and sow on two (2) bush- els of rye. Plow this rye down next spring when knee high.

The rush of work is over. There is time now to attend to this matter of rye for green manure.

A man should be as ashamed to starve his land as to starve his team.

Off to the Fairs.
About the time you read this John Love, W. G. Feldhauser and I will be on our way to the fairs at Bay City, Detroit, and Saginaw, to do what we can to tell the world that Crawford County is on the map.

Some have helped us go prepared. Some have not. I wish all could see four beautiful framed pictures that we are taking of scenes in Crawford County.

No need to go to Yellowstone Park or the Alps of Switzerland to find beauty.

The scene at "Swimming Deer" on the North Branch, as photographed by J. H. Wingard, which we are taking is a dream of beauty. Copies of it could be on the walls of a hundred

Good Chance for Grayling.

One of my friends is a landscape gardener. He is clever at seeing in- stantly what should be planted to make a place look better.

I think it could be arranged to have him in town two days without ex- pense to householders. I would like to take him from house to house, to have him leave a memorandum at each showing just what to plant and where to plant it, to make the premises look better. I will try to arrange to have him come this fall if enough citizens show interest in the idea.

If it apparently does not strike a responsive chord, I shall drop it.

LADIES AID TO ELECT OFFICERS.

Members of the Ladies Aid Society of the Michelson Memorial Church, please take notice that our regular monthly meeting will be held Friday afternoon, September 1st. Will all members please try and be on hand at 2:30 o'clock? The meeting will be very important as election of officers takes place and we hope for a full attendance.

Will members who are in arrears with dues and tank offerings, please send their money to the secretary by the end of the week. Also those who have not turned in their experience money. We would like to close the year's work and not carry over back dues. The refreshment committee for July, August and September will serve lunch. The ladies are splendid cooks so do not miss the treat. Special-Six Touring

$1275

SAVINGS resulting from capacity manufacture are now offered to the buyer of the Studebaker Special-Six. The new price of $1275 is $200 under its former price.

Studebaker reductions became effective August 1st after Studebaker had completed the biggest seven months in its 70 years' history. And at a time when Studebaker had 15,000 unfilled orders on hand! It is a Studebaker policy of long standing to share manufacturing savings with the customer.

The performance, durability, comfort and quality of the Special-

Six are recognized everywhere. And here's new proof of its endurance: Studebaker's sales of repair parts, covering accidents as well as service, for the first seven months of 1922 were less than they were for the first seven months of 1919, in spite of the fact that 186,000 new cars were sold and put into operation since January 1, 1920.

The Special-Six at $1275 represents a new standard of value—the greatest value Studebaker has ever offered, and that means a value that is positively unapproached anywhere in the industry.

Sauerkraut for Fuel

A western paper mill uses "sauerkraut" as a fuel for firing its boilers. Lovers of this teutonic delicacy need not be alarmed, however, for the "sauerkraut" used in this reckless manner is not to be bought at the corner grocery store. This "sauerkraut" is a by-product of their pulp mill and looks so much like the vegetable that it was given that name in the mill. The "sauerkraut" of the pulp mill is in reality the coarse material that is not completely ground up in reducing the logs to pulp. It is caught in screens when the ground pulp is floated away from the machines, and is dried and delivered to the boiler rooms, where it is used for fuel.

Crocodile Kidnaps Rhino.

A traveler in Africa gives an idea of the strength and size of some of the crocodiles which inhabit the rivers and pools of the Dark continent. He describes a huge rhinoceros enjoying a mud bath, gradually disappearing from view in spite of its most frantic struggles and being carried to the depths by a huge crocodile. The rhinoceros, and this was one of the largest of its species—though low set, ranks as one of the largest mammals, so that the size and strength of the crocodile which captured him can be imagined. What would the reptile do with the thick-skinned carcass when he got it? Surely there would be meat enough in it for a dozen crocodiles!

Terrible Train Collision in Missouri

After thirty-four years of running an engine without a mark against his record, Engineer Matt Glenn north-bound on Iron Mountain train No. 4, dashed into the rear end of train No. 34 at Sulphur Springs, Mo., 23 miles south of St. Louis, and killed 37 persons and injured 135. It is believed that when Glenn received an order at Riverside, on the run, and opened it up to read it, he failed to see the block signal which indicated that another train was on the main line in front of him. He himself was among those killed. The illustration shows rescuers removing the dead and injured from the wreck.

CARVING HAS VANISHED

This carving of "Christus De Profundis," which was on a large Florida bean and for which a shrine was planned in New York, has mysteriously disappeared. The carving is a remarkable bit of handwork and was said to have been done by a prisoner condemned to death and an inmate in prison at Falmouth. A drive was started for funds for the erection of a shrine in New York, in which the carving was to be placed, and much money was realized from the sale of photographs of the carving. Now the work has disappeared.

Efficiency.

Lee Junior, age four, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Lee Russell, of Columbia, Ind., has learned a great deal about efficiency, as his mother has many times and labor saving methods which she puts into practice around the house, and which have made a deep impression on Lee Junior. Frequently at night the youngster looks out at the stars, and recites "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star." One night recently when about to recite his little piece, he paused, hesitated awhile and appeared to be in a deep study. In a moment his face lighted, and he evidently found the efficiency idea he wished to apply in the case, for he began:

"Two twinkles, little star; how I wonder what you are."—Indianapolis News.

LOCAL STUDIO MAKES FINE RECORD.

One of the busiest places in Grayling during the encampment of the National Guard has been the Wingard Photo studio. They didn't make much fuss getting ready but when the troops arrived they were on hand with a battery of cameras from the small commercial size to the large panoramic which reached out and took in everything within a wide area. Mr. Wingard was assisted by his daughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Gates, who conduct studios at Clare, and E. J. Wasson of Bay City. From the first click of the cameras until the last consignment of soldiers left the camp the Wingard studio was a hive of industry.

Here is a list of the work that was produced by them: Nine hundred panoramic pictures size 8 inches wide and from 2 1/2 to 3 feet in length; over 1000 post card pictures, and 5000 amateur prints, besides the usual amount of photo business this place enjoys.

All the work from the developing to the finished work was done in that place. Besides this, orders for the pictures had to be secured and deliveries and collections made, and not one order was cancelled nor a single delivery missed. This group of artists worked day and night to accomplish its task and we believe have established a record seldom reached by a studio of similar size. All work is done by electricity which assures better quality and greatly added capacity.

HOT WEATHER DISEASES.

Disorders of the bowels are extremely dangerous particularly during the hot weather of the summer months and in order to protect yourself and family against a sudden attack, get a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy. It can be depended upon. Many have testified to its excellence.

MRS. FRANK FREELAND PASSED AWAY.

Had Been Ill for Long Time. Was Old Resident of Grayling.

Mrs. Frank M. Freeland, passed away at her home in this city at noon last Friday from an illness of over 2 years duration, during which time she had constantly been under a physician's care. Since she took ill, she has had several attacks of the disease and not much hope was held at times for her recovery. Although during her last illness, her death was expected at any hour still her demise was a shock to her family and friends.

The remains were taken Saturday night to Utica, Mich., the birthplace of the deceased, where the funeral was held Monday afternoon. Those who accompanied the remains were: Her husband, Mrs. Clark Yost, Mrs. William Feldhauser, Mr. and Mrs. Jess Seconover and daughter, Pauline.

The deceased lady, had hosts of warm friends in this community and the illness that has blighted the last few years of her life was indeed a regret to them.

Mr. Fournier is an accomplished musician and has composed several operas, one of which will be produced in New York City soon.

While William Newman of South Bend, Indiana, was picking berries in the vicinity of the rifle range at the military reservation near here Saturday, he received a severe gun wound when he was shot thru the knee. A company of soldiers were having target practice at the rifle range and it was one of these bullets which hit Mr. Newman. The victim and his wife who will be known to the older settlers as Miss Minnie Annis are visiting her brother George Annis and family in Beaver Creek township, and the Annis farm is not far from the rifle range. The injured man was taken to Mercy hospital here Saturday and the wound tended to and Monday he was removed to the home of his brother-in-law in Beaver Creek.

TWO SNAPPY BASE BALL GAMES

GRAYLING CYCLONES TOO MUCH FOR SOLDIERS.

Evidently there was no soldier organization at the Military camp a strong enough aggregation to defeat Grayling, as in the four games played while the boys were in camp, the Grayling Cyclones carried away the honors of the series, winning all four games.

Last Saturday and Sunday the 126th Infantry accompanied by their famous band and a bunch of rooters invaded the ball park and they witnessed their gunners go down to defeat, Saturday by a score of 9 to 7 and Sunday 4 to 1. "Baby" Laurent pitched both games for the local and did remarkable work. In the Saturday game he breezed along at an easy gait his team mates getting 18 hits and 9 runs, so that he had everything his own way and did not have to work hard to win. In this way he saved himself for the following day when it was again up to him to fill the position on the mound. And in the first time at bat in the first game he featured in circling the bases on a three base hit and an error, when the fielder made a wild throw over the 3rd baseman's head. The soldiers used two pitchers but were unable to stop the flames of the "heavy-hitters."

The score by innings for the Saturday was as follows:

126th Inf. 4 0 0 0 0 2 0 1 7 7 3
Grayling 1 3 0 0 2 0 2 1 x 9 18 5

Batteries: for Grayling, Laurent and Johnson. For 126th Infantry Hoy, E. Westerhof and Luderman.

Base on balls—T. Laurent 2; off Hoy 1, off Westerhof 1.

Three base hits, B. Laurent, W. Laurent, Keister.
Stolen bases: B. Laurent 1; W. Laurent 2; Johnson 2; Doroh 1.
Sacrifice hits: Johnson 1.
Umpires Duclos and Manning.
Sunday Game.

On Sunday a soldier boys came in strong, having picked up some new players out at camp and of course saved their best pitcher for that day. They had heard that Grayling had only one pitcher and so planned on having everything their own way, but their hopes were shattered when they found they were to face the same pitcher—Laurent. He did not have as easy sailing as in the Saturday game, and so settled down to show the soldiers that he really had something up his sleeve, and he well succeeded. He allowed the visitors only 4 hits and fanned 10 men. The visiting pitcher pitched a good brand of ball, but Laurent knew how to pitch air-tight ball when hits meant runs. Grayling was the first to score making 2 runs in the 6th inning, while the soldiers came back with one in the 7th, only to have the home team score 2 more in the 8th inning, putting the game beyond their reach. Grayling gathered in 9 hits, and did some good all-around playing on the bases and in the field, and the visitors as well did some nice fielding work. It was one of the most interesting games played on the home grounds this season, and the fans were given many thrills. The selections by the 126th band were greatly enjoyed both days.

The score by innings was:

Grayling 0 0 0 0 0 2 0 2 x 4 9 3

Batteries for Grayling, Laurent and Johnson. For 126th Infantry, Stohl and Luderman.

Base on balls—off Stohl 1.

Three base hits: E. Westerhof 2.

Two base hits: Milnes, W. Laurent, Reynolds. Umpires, Duclos and Hoy.

SAME OLD STORY BUT A GOOD ONE.

Mrs. Maala Burns, Savana, Mo., relates an experience, the like of which has happened in almost every neighborhood in this country, and has been told and related by thousands of others, as follows: "I used a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Diarrhoea Remedy about nine years ago and it cured me of flux (dysentery). I had another attack of the same complaint three or four years ago and a few doses of this remedy cured me. I have recommended it to dozens of people since I first used it and shall continue to do so for I know it is a quick and positive cure for bowel troubles."

CAUSE OF APPENDICITIS.

When the bowels are constipated, the lower bowels or large intestines become packed with refuse matter, that is made up largely of germs. These germs enter the vermiform appendix and set up inflammation, which is commonly known as appendicitis. Take Chamberlain's Tablets when needed and keep your bowels regular and you have little to fear from appendicitis.

The annual Osego County fair will be held at Gaylord on Sept. 5, 6, 7 and 8. At least $4,000 will be required this year to finance the affair. Plans are all laid and attractions and exhibits booked.

Roscommon has ten candidates for sheriff, five on the republican ticket and five on the democratic ticket. Among the candidates on the republican ticket are Earl Dutton and Mrs. Jane Johnston. Another contest on the republican ticket is for the office of prosecuting attorney. Hiram E. Smith being opposed by Merle F. Nallist. Also for drain commissioner there is a contest. No doubt there will be a lively fight for sheriff just as there will be in Grayling, where there are seven candidates, five republican and two democrat.

Arthur Lepard and Clayton Girlich of West Branch attempted to break into Ernest Richard's soft drink store Monday night but before they were able to secure any loot were discovered by the proprietor. He reported it to night watch Lon Collier and he soon had Lepard in jail. Girlich attempted to get away by catching a ride behind the tender of the south-bound 11:15 p. m. train but was apprehended when the train arrived in West Branch. He was not brot to Grayling the following day. But boys have been bound over to circuit court for trial.

MYSTERY, MINING, LOVE AND ROMANCE

He stooped and Anita, laughing at her posture, clambered upon his back, her arms about his neck. Fairchild found himself wishing that he could carry her forever, and that the road to the sheriff's office were twenty miles away instead of two. But her voice cut in on his wishes.

"I can walk now. We can get along so much faster!" came her plea. "I'll hold on to you—and you can help me along."

Fairchild released her and she seized his arm. Once, as they floundered through a knee-high mass, Fairchild's arm went quickly about her waist and he lifted her against him as he literally carried her through. When they reached the other side, the arm still held its place—and she did not resist. Some way, after that, the stretch of road faded swiftly. Almost before he realized it, they were at the outskirts of the city.

Grudgingly he gave up his hold upon her, as they hurried for the sidewalks and for the sheriff's office. There Fairchild did not attempt to talk—he left it all to Anita, and Bardwell, the sheriff, listened.

Did you ever carry a pretty girl pick-a-back? Well, it's some experience. Especially when the girl is as pretty and fascinating and altogether adorable as Anita, and especially when the man is as much interested in the girl as is Fairchild. And especially when the carrying is done in a blizzard and the man is just bound to do all he can to help the girl along.

As for the tale Anita and Fairchild tell the sheriff—well, it's a fit climax to a story of mystery, mining, love and romance in the Colorado Rockies—a land where mystery, mining, love and romance are as much a part of things as the scenery.

When young Robert Fairchild's father—a man of mystery, living in fear—was the sheriff's office of the law bother no one, the hero finds himself the owner of a mysterious silver mine, the Blue Poppy. With the inheritance goes a feud and the opposition of a choice collection of scoundrels. Nevertheless, the hero decides to claim the mine and work it. On the way from Denver he meets the heroine—Anita Richmond. She is driving in a desperate hurry, just about two turns of the road ahead of the sheriff. Fairchild helps her change a tire, gets a tip of ten dollars and his life. He is whisked about her to the sheriff. Quite an interesting way of beginning an acquaintance with the prettiest girl in town, who turns out to be engaged—so most people think—to the son of the chief villain—"Squint" Rodaine.

The author? Why, Courtney Ryley Cooper—the writer of short stories and movie scenarios. He ran away as a boy from Kansas City to become a circus clown. Later he wrote circus advertising—no wonder he has a vivid imagination! Anyway, you've undoubtedly read some of his circus stories in the magazines and know how fascinatingly he can write.

CHAPTER I.

It was over. The rambling house, with its rickety, old-fashioned furniture—and its memories—was now deserted, except for Robert Fairchild, and he was deserted within it, wandering from room to room staring at familiar objects with the unfamiliar gaze of one whose vision suddenly has been warped by the visitation of death and the sense of loneliness that it brings.

Loneliness, rather than grief, for it had been Robert Fairchild's promise that he would not suffer in heart for one who had longed to go into a place for which he had waited seemingly in vain. Year after year, Thornton Fairchild had sat in the big armchair by the windows, watching the days grow old and fade into night, studying sunset after sunset, voicing the vain hope that the glowing night might bring the twilight of his own existence—a silent wish except for this, rarely speaking of the past, never giving to the son who worked for him, cared for him, worshipped him, the slightest hint of what might have happened in the dim days of the long ago to transform him into a beaten thing, longing for the final release. And when the end came, it found him in readiness, waiting in the big armchair by the windows. Even now, a book lay on the frayed carpeting of the old room, where it had fallen from relaxing fingers. Robert Fairchild picked it up, and with a sigh restored it to the grim, fumed oak case. His days of petty sacrifices that his father might while away the weary hours with reading were over.

What had been the past? Why the silence? Why the patient, yet impatient wait for death? The son did not know. In all his memories was only one faint picture, painted years before in his childhood: the return of his father from some place, he knew not where, a long conference with his mother behind closed doors, while he, in childlike curiosity, waited without, seeking in vain to catch some explanation. Then a sad-faced woman who cried at night when the house was still, who faded and who died. That was all. The picture carried no explanation.

And now Robert Fairchild stood on the threshold of something he almost feared to learn. Once, on a black, stormy night, he had sat together, father and son before the fire, silent for hours. Then the hand of the white-haired man had reached outward and rested for a moment on the young man's knee.

"I wrote something to you, Boy, a day or so ago," he had said. "That little illness I had prompted me to do it. I—I thought it was only fair to you. After I'm gone, look in the safe. You'll find the combination on a piece of paper hidden in a box cut in that old European history in the bookcase. I have your promise. I know—that you'll not do it until after I'm gone."

Now Thornton Fairchild was gone. But a message had remained behind: one which the patient lips evidently had feared to utter during life. The heart of the son began to pound, slow and hard, as, with the memory of that conversation, he turned toward the bookcase and unlatched the paneled door. A moment more and the hollow history had given up its trust, a bit of paper scratched with numbers. Robert Fairchild turned toward the stairs and the small room on the second floor which had served as his father's bedroom.

There he hesitated before the little iron safe in the corner, summoning the courage to unlock the doors of a dead man's past.

The safe had not been opened in years; that was evident from the creaking of the hinges as they fell, the gummy resistance of the knob as Fairchild turned it in accordance with the directions on the paper. Finally, a great wrench, and the bolt was drawn rudely back; a strong pull, and the safe opened.

Fairchild crouched for a moment, staring, before he reached for the thinner of two envelopes which lay before him. A moment later he straightened and turned toward the light. A crinkling of paper, a quick-drawn sigh between clenched teeth; it was a letter; his strange, quiet, hunted-looking father was talking to him through the medium of ink and paper, after death. He read:

"Before I begin this letter to you I must ask that you take no action whatever until you have seen my attorney—he will be yours from now on. I have never mentioned him to you before; it was not necessary and would only have brought you curiosity which I could not have satisfied. But now, I am afraid, the doors must be unlocked. I am gone. You are young, you have been a faithful son and you are deserving of every good fortune that may possibly come to you. I am praying that the years have made a difference, and that Fortune may smile upon you as she frowned on me. Certainly, she can injure me no longer. My race is run; I am beyond earthly fortunes."

"Therefore, when you have finished with this, take the deeds inclosed in the larger envelope and go to St. Louis. There, look up Henry F. Beamish, attorney-at-law, in the Princess building. He will explain them to you."

"Beyond this, I fear, there is little that can aid you. I cannot tell you what you want you may find if you follow the sure that the other envelope holds forth to you."

"There is always the hope that Fortune may be kind to me at last, and smile upon my memory by never letting you know why I have been the sort of man you have known, and not the jovial, genial companion that a father should be. But there are certain things, my son, which defeat a man. Therefore it is not better that it remain behind a cloud until such time as Fortune may reveal it and hope that such a time will never come? I think so—not for myself, for when you read this, I shall be gone; but for you, that you may not be handicapped by the knowledge of the thing which whitened my hair and aged me, long before my time."

"If he lives, and I am sure he does, there is, one who will hurry to your aid as soon as he knows you need him. Accept his counsel, laugh at his little eccentricities if you will, but follow his judgment implicitly. Above all, ask him no questions that he does not care to answer—there are things that he may not deem wise to tell."

"There is little more to say. Beamish will attend to everything for you. If you care to go. Sell everything that is here; the house, the furniture, the belongings. It is my wish, and you will need the capital—if you go. And if circumstances should arise to bring before you the story of that which has caused me so much darkness, I have nothing to say in self-extenuation. I made one mistake—of fear—and in committing one error. I shouldered every blame. It makes little difference now. I am dead—and free."

"My love to you, my son. I hope that wealth and happiness await you. Blood of my blood flows in your veins—and strange though it may sound to you—it is the blood of an adventurer. They say, once in the blood, it never dies. My wish is that you succeed where I failed—and God be with you."

"YOUR FATHER."

For a long moment Robert Fairchild stood staring at the letter, his heart pounding with excitement, his hands grasping the foolscap paper as though with a desire to tear through the shield which the written words had formed about a mysterious past and disclose that which was so effectively hidden. So much had the letter told—and yet so little! Dark had been the hints of some mysterious, intangible thing, great enough in its horror and its far-reaching consequences to cause death for one who had known of it and a living pain for him who had perpetrated it. In that super-calmness which accompanies great agitation, Fairchild folded the paper, placed it in its envelope, then slipped it into an inside pocket. A few steps and he was before the safe once more and reaching for the second envelope.

Heavy and bulky was this, filled with tax receipts, with plats and blueprints and the reports of surveyors. Here was an assay list, bearing figures and notations which Robert Fairchild could not understand, then a legal document, sealed and stamped, and bearing the words:

County of Clear Creek, ss.

State of Colorado, ss.

DEED PATENT.

KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS: That on this day of our Lord, February 22, 1892, Thornton W. Fairchild, having presented the necessary affidavits and statements of assessments accomplished in accordance with—

On it trailed in endless legal phraseology, telling in muddled, attorney-like language, the fact that the law had been fulfilled in its requirements, and that the claim for which Thornton Fairchild had worked was rightfully edge to feel the tingle of it; the old house suddenly became stuffy and prisonlike as he wandered through it. Again and again pounded through his head the fact that only a night of travel intervened between Indianapolis and St. Louis; within twelve hours he could be in the office of Henry Beamish. And then—

A hurried resolution. A hasty packing of a traveling bag and the cashing of a check at the cigar store down on the corner. A wakeful night while the train clattered along upon its journey. At last—

"I'm Robert Fairchild," he said, as he faced a white-haired, cup-faced man in the rather dingy offices in the Princess building. A slow smile spread over the pudgy features of the kindly-looking attorney, and he waved a fat hand toward the office's extra chair.

"Sit down, Son," came casually. "Needn't have announced yourself. I'd have known you—just like your father, Boy. How is he?" Then his face suddenly sobered. "I'm afraid your presence is the answer. Am I right?"

Fairchild nodded gravely. The old attorney stared out of the window to the grimy roof and signboards of the next building.

"Perhaps it's better so," he said at last. "Did he get any cheerier before—he went?"

"No. Afraid of every step on the veranda, of every knock at the door."

Again the attorney stared out of the window.

"And you? Are you afraid?"

"Yes, what?"

"I don't know. Only—"

and he leaned forward—"It's just as though I were living my younger days over again this morning. It doesn't seem any time at all since your father was sitting just about where you are now, and had, Boy, how much you look like he looked that morning! The same gray-blue eyes, the same dark hair, the same strong shoulders, and good, manly chin, the same build—and look of determination about him. The call of adventure was in his blood, and he sat there all enthusiastically, telling me what he intended doing and asking my advice—although he wouldn't have followed it if I had given it. Back home was a baby and the woman he loved, and out West was sudden wealth, waiting for the right man to come along and add it. God! White-haired old Beamish chuckled with the memory of it. "Then four years later," the tone changed suddenly, "he came back."

"What then?" Fairchild was on the edge of his chair. But Beamish only spread his hands.

"Truthfully, Boy, I don't know. I have guessed—but I won't tell you what. All I know is that your father found what he was looking for and was on the point of achieving his every dream, when something happened. Then three men simply disappeared from the mining camp, announcing that they had failed and were going to hunt new diggings. That was all. One of them was your father—"

"But you said that he'd found—"

"Silver, running twenty ounces to the ton on an eight-inch vein which gave evidences of being only the beginning of a bonanza! I know, because he had written me that, a month before."

"And he abandoned it?"

"He'd forgotten what he had written when I saw him again. I didn't question him. He went home then, after giving me enough money to pay the taxes on the mine for the next twenty years, simply as his attorney and without divulging his whereabouts. I did it. Eight years or so later I saw him in Indianapolis. He gave me more money—enough for eleven or twelve years—"

"And that was ten years ago?" Robert Fairchild's eyes were reminiscent. "I remember—I was only a kid. He sold off everything he had, except the house."

Henry Beamish walked to his safe and fumbled there a moment, to return last with a few slips of paper. "Here's the answer," he said quietly. "The taxes are paid until 1922."

Robert Fairchild studied the receipts carefully—futilely. They told him nothing. The lawyer stood looking down upon him; at last he laid a hand on his shoulder.

"They Call Him 'Squint' Rodaine."

do, whatever you run into, whatever friends or enemies you find awaiting you, don't let that light die out of your eyes and don't pull in that chin! If you find a fight on your hands, whether it's man, beast or nature, sail into it! If you run into things that cut your very heart out to learn—beat 'em down and keep going! And win! There—that's all the advice I know. Meet me at the 11:10 train for Indianapolis. Goodbye!"

"Goodbye—I'll be there." Fairchild grasped the pudgy hand and left the office. For a moment afterward, old Henry Beamish stood thinking and looking out over the dingy roof adjacent. Then, somewhat absentmindedly, he pressed the ancient electric button for his more ancient stenographer.

"Call a messenger, please," he ordered when she entered, "I want to send a telegram."

"For goodness' sake, come here! I'll give you five dollars. Hurry!"

CHAPTER II.

In spite of all that omens could foretell, in spite of the dull, gloomy life which had done its best to fashion a matter-of-fact brain for Robert Fairchild, one sentence in that letter had found an echo, had started a pulsating something within him that he never before had known:

"It is the blood of an adventurer."

And it seemed that Robert Fairchild needed no more than the knowl-

all countries where the Roman church has adherents. The order has been distinguished throughout its existence for the great learning and scholarship possessed by its members.

Most Exquisite Play Farm.

"You love flowers. I have a bouquet to give you—the Petit Trillion," said Louis XVI to his wife, the famous Marie Antoinette. Thus was built the most exquisite play farm ever known. Here in a wood of 800 trees, beyond the formal gardens of Versailles, the young queen and her court had their own dairy and garden and poultry, with a thatched Swiss chalet to live in. Here they served suppers, the queen herself serving her guests—an experience for her, who, according to the court etiquette, could allow no one even to sit in her presence.

Not Talk.

Was Known As Protestant Pope

Sobriquet Bestowed on Clement XIV When He Suppressed the Order of Jesuits.

Pope Clement XIV bears the sobriquet of "the Protestant Pope." Although he was by no means a member of the Protestant faith, he earned this title by a bull which he issued in 1773, ordering the suppression of the Order of the Jesuits. This seemed to the devout Catholic a concession to Protestantism, and thus Clement was given his title.

The Jesuit order was established in 1537 by Ignatius Loyola, and its chief aim was to establish the power of the pope and to preserve it against the attacks of the Protestants. It grew to be the most powerful society of the Roman Catholic church, gaining its influence principally through the excellent schools which its members founded and maintained. Its potency grew to such an extent that the temporal authorities took alarm and, in 1773, France, Spain, Portugal, Parma, Naples and Austria prevailed upon Pope Clement to issue his bull abolishing the order. It was re-established by Pope Pius VII in 1801 after the fall of Napoleon in 1815 and is now in a thriving condition in and he leaned forward—"It's just as though I were living my younger days over again this morning. It doesn't seem any time at all since your father was sitting just about where you are now, and had, Boy, how much you look like he looked that morning! The same gray-blue eyes, the same dark hair, the same strong shoulders, and good, manly chin, the same build—and look of determination about him. The call of adventure was in his blood, and he sat there all enthusiastically, telling me what he intended doing and asking my advice—although he wouldn't have followed it if I had given it. Back home was a baby and the woman he loved, and out West was sudden wealth, waiting for the right man to come along and add it. God! White-haired old Beamish chuckled with the memory of it. "Then four years later," the tone changed suddenly, "he came back."

"What then?" Fairchild was on the edge of his chair. But Beamish only spread his hands.

"Truthfully, Boy, I don't know. I have guessed—but I won't tell you what. All I know is that your father found what he was looking for and was on the point of achieving his every dream, when something happened. Then three men simply disappeared from the mining camp, announcing that they had failed and were going to hunt new diggings. That was all. One of them was your father—"

"But you said that he'd found—"

"Silver, running twenty ounces to the ton on an eight-inch vein which gave evidences of being only the beginning of a bonanza! I know, because he had written me that, a month before."

"And he abandoned it?"

"He'd forgotten what he had written when I saw him again. I didn't question him. He went home then, after giving me enough money to pay the taxes on the mine for the next twenty years, simply as his attorney and without divulging his whereabouts. I did it. Eight years or so later I saw him in Indianapolis. He gave me more money—enough for eleven or twelve years—"

"And that was ten years ago?" Robert Fairchild's eyes were reminiscent. "I remember—I was only a kid. He sold off everything he had, except the house."

Henry Beamish walked to his safe and fumbled there a moment, to return last with a few slips of paper. "Here's the answer," he said quietly. "The taxes are paid until 1922."

Robert Fairchild studied the receipts carefully—futilely. They told him nothing. The lawyer stood looking down upon him; at last he laid a hand on his shoulder.

"They Call Him 'Squint' Rodaine."

do, whatever you run into, whatever friends or enemies you find awaiting you, don't let that light die out of your eyes and don't pull in that chin! If you find a fight on your hands, whether it's man, beast or nature, sail into it! If you run into things that cut your very heart out to learn—beat 'em down and keep going! And win! There—that's all the advice I know. Meet me at the 11:10 train for Indianapolis. Goodbye!"

"Goodbye—I'll be there." Fairchild grasped the pudgy hand and left the office. For a moment afterward, old Henry Beamish stood thinking and looking out over the dingy roof adjacent. Then, somewhat absentmindedly, he pressed the ancient electric button for his more ancient stenographer.

"Call a messenger, please," he ordered when she entered, "I want to send a telegram."

"For goodness' sake, come here! I'll give you five dollars. Hurry!"

CHAPTER II.

In spite of all that omens could foretell, in spite of the dull, gloomy life which had done its best to fashion a matter-of-fact brain for Robert Fairchild, one sentence in that letter had found an echo, had started a pulsating something within him that he never before had known:</

True Detective Stories

MATTER OF MINUTES

Copyright by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

IT WAS evident that the robbery of the Rock Island Express had been effected in less than a quarter of an hour. The express car had been hit on immediately behind the engine, and one of the firemen recalled having seen Kellogg, the messenger, checking up his accounts about fifteen minutes before the train pulled into Morris, Ill. The next time he glanced up a shade had been pulled across the window of the express car, and the first he knew of the robbery was after the train stopped at Morris, and Pitney, the brakeman, shouted out that Kellogg had been killed and that thousands of dollars was missing from the safe.

Jameson, who was in charge of the baggage car, directly behind the express car, provided what appeared to be the only clue to the crime, by stating that shortly after the train left Joliet, a man in a red mask had entered his car, held him up at the point of a revolver, and had then passed through to the car beyond, leaving Jameson in charge of another masked man who had disappeared as the train slowed down at Morris.

"I was scared stiff," admitted the baggage man, "and didn't dare budge."

The express authorities at Morris promptly sidetracked the express car, and wired the details of the case to William A. Pinkerton, who arrived only a few hours later. Meanwhile, however, the contents of the safe had been checked up, and it was discovered that more than $20,000 was missing. Kellogg, the messenger, was dead, but before dying, he had evidently given a good account of himself.

Before he did anything else, Pinkerton walked back over the track on which the train had come into Morris. Less than half a mile out he discovered a red mask, lying close to the track, and he also noted a most significant fact—although there was more than a foot of snow upon the ground, there were no foot-prints within a quarter-mile of the mask!

Returning to Morris, the detective commenced his examination of the express car, but failed to find anything of value.

Close inspection of the body of the dead messenger, however, brought to light another point which Pinkerton felt certain ought to prove valuable. Under Kellogg's finger nails was a considerable quantity of what at first appeared to be wet paper or pulp of some kind, but which the detective recognized as the outer layers of human skin, torn off during the struggle when the messenger's fingers were fighting to secure a hold upon his assailant!

Upon returning to Chicago, Pinkerton at once requested the officials of the road to have all the men employed on the train come to his office, one by one, to be interviewed. Jameson, he directed, was to be the last man sent.

When Pitney, the brakeman, entered, Pinkerton did not overlook the fact that he was dressed in a new outfit which was distinctly above his sphere in life. From the points of his glossy shoes to the top of his new derby, the brakeman had evidently treated himself to a brand-new wardrobe in honor of his interview with the famous detective. In spite of the fact that he had very little to tell. It was he who had discovered the robbery, but he had seen nothing of the man in the red mask, though Jameson's excited recital of the hold-up had caused him immediately to investigate the express car.

"That was just as we were pulling into Morris," concluded the brakeman, "and I saw a yell the minute I saw what they had done to Kellogg."

"That's what I wanted to talk to you about," said Pinkerton. "Sit down, won't you? And take off your coat. It's warm in here. . . . Your gloves, too, he added, noting that Pitney kept his hands covered."

After a moment's hesitation, the brakeman peeled off his new gloves, and Pinkerton had difficulty in concealing a start of satisfaction. The backs of the man's hands were scarred and scored with a network of scratches!

"Been playing with the cat?" inquired Pinkerton casually.

"No, no," Pitney replied. "I got those handling a busted trunk a few nights ago," and then he launched into a description of his experiences on the night of the robbery. When he had finished, Pinkerton thanked him and bowed him out of the office, but the muffled buzz of a bell in the anteroom informed the men stationed there that Pitney was to be followed night and day.

"So far as I was concerned," Pinkerton said later, "the case ended right there. The backs of Pitney's hands, coupled with the absence of foot-prints in the vicinity of the red mask, which proved that the job had been handled by someone on the train—gave the whole thing dead away. There had been no hold-up in the baggage car. Therefore, Jameson was in the game, too. The pair of them had framed up a most plausible story, which, if it hadn't been for the shreds of skin under the dead man's nails, stood a good chance of being believed. "As it was, my men shadowed them until they got careless and began spending their stolen money. Then we closed in, recovered all but $2,000 and sent the pair to the penitentiary for life! Dead men may not tell tales, but sometimes their fingers do!"

ANIMAL PARK

"They think they're important, and they think correctly," said the Lion. "Yes," said the Leopard, "that is right."

"What are you talking about now?" asked the Hyena.

"Well," said the Lion, "they have an announcement. An announcement is like a notice, you know. And this one is about us. They're letting the people know when we're fed so they can come and see us. They're telling the visitors that the Lions and the Tigers and the Leopards, and the Hyenas, the Chimpanzees and some of the rest of us are all fed in our house, the Lion House, named in honor of us, at half-past one each day. That is our breakfast, dinner and supper combined—which means that it is our breakfast, dinner and supper all in one."

"They also say that the Tigers and ourselves are not fed on Sunday, for it is good for our health not to be fed each day, or rather to have one day in the week when we give—or the keepers give—our tummies a rest. The other animals are fed here at the same time on Sundays."

"Then they say that the Bears and the Sea-Lions have breakfast at eight in the morning and dinner at three in the afternoon. It is said that the Monkeys have breakfast at nine-thirty, for they do not care to breakfast too early in the morning. They have their dinner at three in the afternoon, too. The Wolves have one meal a day at quarter after one, which is their dinner, while the Birds are fed at half-past two in the afternoon, though of course they get little odd meals all the time. It is true," the Lion continued, "that most of us get those, too, and the Birds always have water to drink, and so it is."

"But still people do not speak of their little odd meals but only of their main meals, and so I have done the same, and these main meals are the ones they've invited the visitors to come and see us eat. Well, I think it is pretty fine. It shows that we're of great importance."

"No one goes to see people eat. They couldn't gather a crowd about them. It is the animals that the people come to see."

"Yes, it is our meal time they come to see. Ah, how interesting that is to think that the people come to see us eat, and yet they couldn't get us to go and see them eat even if we were free. And they couldn't even get each other to view such a performance, I'm sure."

So the Lion talked.

In another part of the Animal Park Mrs. Hippopotamus was talking to her young son.

"You were a fine swimmer from the moment you were born, and you're going to be generous with your portions as we all are. By that I mean that you, too, will have a great huge mouth and great, enormous feet, and a mighty body. There won't be anything small and mean about you. You'll be generous in your size. And that is the proper spirit, the proper spirit, indeed."

In yet another part of the Animal Park the African Elephant was talking to the Indian Elephant.

"It's mostly a matter of ears," the African Elephant said. "My ears are much larger than yours and I am larger, too, but you're more usual. By that I mean to say that there seem to be more of you about in parks and circuses."

"I'm glad of it," said the Indian Elephant, "for I am quite sociable by nature."

The Tapers, too, were talking. They are strange looking, but perhaps they look more like seals than any other creatures. "The children have pretty stripes when they're born, which they lose before they're grown-up Tapers," they said. But then they talked no more, for there was beginning to be a slight rainstorm and they wanted to enjoy the fun of it.

Following Orders.

Going into his stable one day, a Rogers Park man found his little son, with a slate and pencil in his hand, astride one of the horses.

"Why, Eddie," he exclaimed, "what in the world are you doing?"

"Writing a composition," replied little Eddie.

"Well, why don't you write it in the library?" asked his father.

"Because," answered Eddie, "the teacher told us to write a composition on a horse."

All Tinned Stuff.

"Mother, do cows and bees go to heaven?"

"Mercy child, what a question! Why?"

"Because if they don't the milk and honey the preacher said was up there must be all tinned stuff."—Oward.

Too Ticklish to Count.

Teacher—Now, Bobbie, how many ribs have you?

Bobbie—I don't know. I'm so ticklish I can never count 'em!—The Pith-ander.

New Knitted Textiles; Coats and Coat Dresses

THESE enterprising manufacturers who make our knitted wear for us have been experimenting with textiles lately and have turned out some beautiful fabrics that have the added allure of novelty. Among them are the fiber-silk and worsted combinations classed as matelasse, which present a lustrous surface covered with motifs in contrasting or self color. They follow the successful printed patterns on knitted textiles used for sports coats.

These new patterns in knitted goods are making their appearance in hand-ity coat that is needed and these are the garments that move early and in quick succession from the merchant's assortment of new models. There is a demand for these smartly tailored, mannish overcoats right now and they appear in English mixtures, with plaid back, tweeds, velours and polo cloth. They are made with collars that may be buttoned up closely about the throat or worn open across the shoulders, they hang in full, loose lines, are ample in width and length and sometimes have belts or narrow some frocks which have all the character of those made for afternoon wear. This is a hitherto unoccupied field, for knitted fabrics have been identified with sports clothes where they have been entirely successful.

Sports suits and dresses, in heavy and light weights, and greatly varied in texture by variations in the knitting, are beginning to vie with sweaters in variety of design.

Another field has been invaded by the knitted dress of wool. It is a comfortable and sturdy garment for the little school girl and appears in slip-over frocks in one color with decorations in contrasting colors knitted in. A gray or blue dress in a plain, close stitch, has bands of red, orange and green about the bottom of the skirt and sleeves, and around the waist. A narrow knitted silk girdle at the waist and a similar tie at the neck, match the dress in color.

Very attractive knitted trimmings of wool yarn are used on dresses and suits of Jersey cloth or to finish girdles that are worn very loose. Tailors vary them in many ways and use patch pockets and large buttons to give them a snappy finish.

In a clever overcoat of tweed, in two-toned plaid, the tailor has contrived unusual sleeves having slashed cuffs ornamented with large buttons. The collar is the new "tunnel" design and these are little points that distinguish the coat illustrated from others of its kind.

The smart utility coat sells itself, to fill a definite need, but not everyone needs a coat, and there are some intriguing coat dresses calculated to coax money out of those who are not driven by necessity to part with it.

They are handsome affairs that will serve without a coat for wear in autumn and with one for winter. One of them is shown here. It is made of man's-wool serge and has novel sleeves, with pendant panels finished with silk fringe. Loose straps, embroidered with silk floss and ending in long silk tassels, hang from the knitted dresses of fiber silk. These trimmings are knitted in many ways, those of wool yarn in loops are among the most effective. Fiber silk makes some of the handsomest trimmings and dresses. It appears as a trimming on the overblouse of crepe de chine which is illustrated, worn with heavy crepe skirt. Very handsome tassels of the silk finish a soft girdle of the crepe de chine.

When a woman simply must have a wrap, usually it is a practical utility coat that is needed and these are the garments that move early and in quick succession from the merchant's assortment of new models. FORESEES VOYAGE TO MOON

Frenchman Predicts That in Near Future the Trip Can Be Made in Forty-Nine Hours.

M. Esnault-Pelterie of the Paris Aero club predicts that the utilization of the intra-atomic energy will enable men in the near future to travel from the earth to the moon in 49 hours. The first 31 minutes, it seems, will be very agreeable, but during the 48 hours and 29 minutes of the second part of the course one will have the sensation of a terrible fall in the void.

And this reminds one of the charming story told by Mark Twain: One morning when standing at the window he perceived a human body falling through the air.

TO DARN QUICKLY

A good way to darn a run quickly is to use a traveling or a single strand of darning cotton to fill in the run with a zigzag stitch. For the first stitch bring the needle up from the under side of the material; for the next, bring it down from the upper side. Continue as long as is necessary, catching the run near the edges. Have the thread rather loose and when you have filled in the run pull it just enough to draw the edges together.

For that kind of darning the stitches should be set about an eighth of an inch apart.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.

At a meeting of the Board of Supervisors of the county of Crawford, commenced and held at the Court House in the village of Grayling on Monday the 23rd day of June 1922 under the provisions of Act No. 8 of the Public Acts of 1912.

Present: M. A. Bates, Charles Craven, J. E. Kellogg, Hans Christenson, Joseph J. Royce. Absent, James P. Knibbs.

Board called to order by the chairman. Moved by Royce, supported by Christenson that the communications read be placed on file. Motion carried. Moved by Craven, supported by Kellogg that the clerk be and is hereby authorized to purchase a new engine for the county infirmary.

Moved by Christenson, supported by Royce that the Board adjourn until tomorrow morning at nine o'clock. Motion carried.

Prohibition of the issuance of all tax free securities would tend toward the future development of our great State and Nation. And whereas, the present mortgage tax law in its operation works an injustice upon the tax payers and in spirit is closely allied to the tax free security.

And whereas, all tax free securities and of a similar character find a ready market and so become an incentive to extravagance in public expenditures. Therefore be it resolved that this Board of Supervisors of Crawford County, Michigan, in general meeting assembled do hereby petition and request the several legislative departments of our State to do everything in their power to stop the issuance of any and all tax free securities in the State of Michigan, and further request that the State constitution be amended so as to change the present mortgage law that a more just and equal taxation may be secured.

Moved by Kellogg, supported by Royce that the resolution be accepted, approved and adopted. Motion carried.

Moved by Royce, supported by Christenson, that the communication of the State Welfare Commission be laid on the table. Motion carried. Resolved, that whereas the township of South Branch contemplates the construction of a cement bridge over and across the South Branch river, a tributary of the AuSable, which bridge is known as the Smith's to extend $40.00 each $25.00 for the same, which is a large sum of money, on submission of an itemized statement of such expense incurred. Yea and Nay vote called. All members voting yea. Motion carried. Reopened to one o'clock.

Board called to order by the chairman. Moved by Christenson, supported by Craven that Mr. O. F. Barnes and Mr. A. Bates be selected as delegates of this board to attend the annual meeting of the State Board of Equalization to represent this county's interest therein, and that said delegates be allowed the regular per diem of $4.00 and necessary traveling expenses incident thereto on submission of an itemized statement of such expense incurred. Yea and Nay vote called. All members voting yea. Motion carried.

Moved by Christenson, supported by Craven that the bills of the several Supervisors be allowed as charged and that the clerk be and is herewith authorized to draw orders for the same. Yea and Nay vote called. All members voting yea. Motion carried. Moved by Royce, supported by Christenson that the chairman and clerk be and are herewith authorized and directed to cause the inner row of poplar trees to be removed from the court house grounds with the understanding that makes a all be planted in place of the trees removed at the proper planting season, also to permit the removal of two line trees between the court yard and J. Resolution. Be it resolved that we are opposed to any attempt to create a State Drainage Engineer or the appropriation of any funds in connection with the same or the passing of any laws or amendments relative thereto.

Moved by Craven, supported by Kellogg that the resolution be accepted and adopted. Motion carried. WHEREAS in our opinion the issuance of tax free securities in the State of Michigan is unequal in a country which boasts equality without class and is working as a menace to productive and home building, and whereas the opportunity to invest in such tax dodging securities has induced the withdrawal of money from the local banks and so reduced the available funds in the communities which otherwise could and would be used for constructive purposes.

Moved by Christenson supported by Kellogg that William G. Feldhauser and John A. Love be selected as delegates of this board to attend the annual meeting of the State Board of Equalization to represent this county's interest therein, and that said delegates be allowed the regular per diem of $4.00 and necessary traveling expenses incident thereto on submission of an itemized statement of such expense incurred. Yea and Nay vote called. All members voting yea. Motion carried.

Moved by Royce, supported by Kellogg that the Board adjourn until tomorrow morning at nine o'clock. Motion carried.

THE WEARY WAY.
Daily, Becoming Less Wearisome to Many in Grayling.
With a back that aches all day, With rest disturbed at night, Annoying urinary disorders, This is a weary way, indeed. Doan's Kidney Pills are especially for kidney trouble. Are endorsed by Grayling citizens. Ask your neighbor!
Mrs. W. H. Cowell, Maple St., Grayling, says: "Kidney trouble had me in miserable condition. My back bothered me especially at night and I felt all tired when I awoke. I was in misery on straightening and I always felt nervous and depressed. I felt just as tired in the morning as I did when I went to bed the night before and often I saw black specks float before my eyes which made me dizzy. Severe headaches caused me many a distressful hour. My kidneys were in poor condition when I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I used several boxes and after taking them I felt fine. Thanks to Doan's Pills."
Price 60c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Cowell had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.
